Unlike Mount Vernen, the Old South church and similar buildings in the east, which once were centers of historical interest, but are now only museums, the governor's palace has never ceased to be the seat of authority in New Mexico since cial colony of Spain. Here in 1822 the Mexican standard, with its eagle and cactus, was raised in token that New Mexico was no longer a dependency of Spain. Here on August 12, 1846, Captain Crooke, the American envoy, was received by Governor Armijo and sent back with a message of defiance. The very excellent collection of the New Mexico Historical society now occupies a portion of the palace, the ultimate use of which will probably be as a repository for the wonderfully varied and interesting
